Recycle Your Crocs With Fossil Rim Wildlife Center

Fossil Rim has become the only place within a hundred mile radius to accept your worn-out Croc™ shoes for recycling. Crocs, Inc. has launched SolesUnited™, the first-of-its-kind, recycled footwear donation program dedicated to providing new quality footwear to people in need worldwide. Their goal is to donate two million pairs of recycled Crocs™ shoes to those in need in 2008. You might have seen this program featured on "The Apprentice".

The concept is simple; consumers donate their worn out Crocs™ footwear at participating locations where they are sorted, cleaned, ground into new material, and manufactured into new recycled shoes. Once manufactured, the shoes are distributed to those in need utilizing the support of shipping and charity partners.

SolesUnited™ Crocs™ shoes are made from the same recycled proprietary Croslite™ material as the donated shoes, yet these shoes are sold exclusively at select retail outlets and at www.crocs.com. These shoes are unique in that not only are they constructed out of a portion of recycled material, but for each pair of SolesUnited™ recycled shoes purchased, Crocs, Inc. will match the purchase by donating a pair of recycled donated shoes through the SolesUnited™ program to an individual living in an impoverished area of the world. Additionally, the recycled donated shoes are not available at retail.

According to the World Bank Group one of every six people in the world lives on less than $1 a day. These are the people that Soles United wishes to help. Your participation will be vital to making this a successful campaign. Your satisfaction in helping others will be the greatest reward. To assist in making this world a better place, bring or send your worn-out Crocs™ to Fossil Rim Wildlife Center, you will find a donation area at the Front Gate.
